Survey Data

In important part of our Services is to undertake professional surveys to better understand employer and employee needs, capabilities, and business models and develop ratings for certain types of categories related thereto. In the event you participate in such a survey, we will use the information derived therefrom for the following purposes:

Employer Profiles. As part of our Employer Profile surveys, you have an opportunity to provide us feedback about your workplace experience with a particular employer. Our editors consolidate, review, and analyze your feedback (and the survey results of other participants) and write a summary of these experiences within an Employer Profile on our Site. Firsthand editors may also select quotes from within your survey feedback to include as part of an Employer Profile. Please be aware that Employer Profiles, including your feedback therein, may be published to the general public and therefore you should avoid including in your feedback any personal information or other details that might compromise your own anonymity or that of any other individual.

Employee/Intern Reviews. For our Employee/Intern Review surveys, you have an opportunity to provide us feedback about your workplace experience with a particular employer and your feedback may be published within an Employer Review on our Site. Your feedback may be posted without any editorial review by us. In addition, you may register with Firsthand in order to submit reviews, insights, and opinions about your current or former employers or schools. In either case, while your name is not associated with a quotation or review, the review may be accompanied by general identifiers, where provided, such as office location, position/level, department, or year in which the survey was conducted. The review also identifies whether you are a “verified employee” or “verified intern” to indicate that the comment was collected through Firsthand’s survey process and distinguish it from other user-generated reviews.

Blog Posts, Career Advice, and Other Forums. Firsthand may use anonymous comments and/or aggregated scores provided to our surveys for the purposes of publishing blog posts or articles; making presentations; or participating in public or private forums or other discussions on employee satisfaction, perceptions of employers, and industry trends.

Research Reports. Firsthand may use aggregated and de-identified data from our surveys for the purposes of client research, to help employers benchmark employers against the industry and their peers and/or to gauge relative levels of satisfaction among their own employees. In the event these research reports include the survey’s text feedback, Firsthand reviews and edits, as necessary, such feedback to seek to minimize the personal information associated with your comments. However, you should be aware that their comments may be published or used for research and avoid including details that might compromise their anonymity.
